20 JUNE 2006

Offshore Business Magazine official media partner for Cayman Islands Bankers' Association Conference, 2006.

May 22nd and 23rd 2006, Grand Cayman

The conference attracted over 120 senior-level executives from leading banks, financial services firms and industry leaders both from the Cayman Islands and internationally.

The 10th CIBA conference also generated many newspaper headlines in the local Caymanian press and media this year. The Cayman Compass, The Cayman Journal, The Cayman Net News and The Cayman Observer, quoted the opening addresses which were made by the CIBA president Eduardo D'Angelo Silva and Governor Stuart Jack. The lead media sponsor Cayman Financial Review, produced a dedicated supplement which was distributed to all of the attending delegates. The Cayman Free Press, the local Caymanian media sponsor has now published a CIBA 2006 supplement and this was distributed in the June edition of The Journal.

The conference was generally supported by all of the international media sponsors such as Global Custodian, Offshore Business Magazine and Institutional Investor.

Overview:

This year's theme, The changing face of banking, captures the dynamic development of the international banking sector over the past decade. Consolidation of many of the world's largest banks, further synergies between banking and other key sectors such as mutual funds and insurance, among others and technological and regulatory developments have all resulted in changes in the international banking environment.

The conference will look at the future of banking in the Cayman Islands, still widely regarded as the world's leading offshore banking centre.

In addition to its position in the international banking arena, the Cayman Islands position as the worlds' top hedge funds domicile and as the second largest captive insurance centre in the world makes it the ideal jurisdiction to reflect on the changing face of banking.

With the choice of venue as the Ritz-Carlton Grand Cayman Resort, this year's event will not only stimulate attendees with the latest topics in international banking, but it will also provide for a perfect setting, merging first class facilities and amenities with the warm hospitality of the Cayman Islands.

All combining to make the Cayman Islands Bankers' Association Conference of 2006 the must attend event of this year.
